❖ Full Response

Well, in my case, I agree with the given statement. And, I feel this way for a couple of reasons. First of all, teenagers do not have enough knowledge about political issues. To be more specific, teenagers do not have extensive experience about political matters. As a result, they may not understand the situation and may not be able to make smart decisions. Another reason is that teenagers do not have enough life experience. What I mean is that these days, having extensive experience is a valuable asset for the future because we are often evaluated by the amount of experience. However, teenagers do not have this because they just graduated from high school. So, this is why I agree with the given statement.

Bike Sharing Program
When the university's bike sharing program began during the spring semester, I thought that it was a wonderful idea. It provides students with a healthy alternative to driving their cars around the campus. However, this fall semester has revealed some flaws in the program that I think need to be addressed immediately. Firstly, there is no limit placed upon how long one student may use a bike. So, some students keep them all day long. I think students should only be able to borrow a bike for up to four hours. That way, more students can take advantage of the program. Secondly, the current program requires students to pay a deposit fee in cash. Most students are short on money, so I think that we should have to leave our student IDs instead. Karl McCoy

Now listen to a conversation.

❖ Listening Script

M: Did you see this post on the university's web page about the bicycles?

W: Bicycles? Oh, you mean about the bike sharing program? Yes, I saw it.

M: I know that you often use those bikes. So, what do you think about what he had to say?

W: I understand the points that he made. The system isn't perfect, but it's also fairly new. That said, I don't completely agree with him.

M: Oh, how so?

W: Well, he said that he thinks that there should be a maximum time limit for borrowing a bike. You already have to bring them back the same day or pay a fine. And four hours, that just isn't a very long time. Last week I rode out to Grand Lake with some friends. We left in the morning, and we didn't get back until dusk. It was a long ride.

M: Yes, and some of my friends take them downtown to do research at the legal library. They can be gone for much more than four hours.

W: Exactly. I think that they should have to give an approximate return time. If they cannot get back by that time, they should call the service to extend. That way, at least the staff will have a good idea of when the bike will come back, so they can tell other people who want to borrow them.

M: Sounds good to me.

W: And the idea of leaving your ID instead of a cash deposit, I don't think he thought that through.

M: Why?

W: Can you get into your dormitory or use the dining halls without your ID card?

M: No. No, you cannot. I guess you're right.

❖ Question

❖ Full Response

The student in the letter proposes that the university make changes to the bike sharing program. First, the students should only be able to borrow a bike up to four hours. Secondly, students should have to leave their student IDs instead of a deposit. However, the woman in the conversation is not fully in support with the idea. And, she feels this way for a couple of reasons. Her first reason is that setting a maximum time limit is not a good idea. According to the woman most students ride the bike for more than four hours. Another reason she mentions is that she is concerned about leaving the student ID. She explains that students cannot enter other facilities on campus without a student ID. Therefore, the woman opposes the idea of the letter.
